ORDER # 81601 Allergy Specific

Support your body's fight against allergies!

Put mother nature on your side!

· Maintain normal cholesterol levels and healthy vision

· Enhance the body's response mechanisms to allergies and asthma

Recommended Dosage: One - two capsules daily or as otherwise directed by a physician.

Description: Allergy Specific is a combination of 333 mg. of Quercitin 100 mg. Bromelain and 20 mg. Magnesium in a capsule form.

Actions: Quercitin works synergistically with bromelain to provide the body with bioflavonoids which the body cannot produce alone. When used with vitamin C, the Bioflavonoids act synergistically to maximize the distribution and uptake of the vitamin C. Quercitin (a bioflavonoid) and Bromelain have been used to improve circulation, regulate cholesterol levels, maintain healthy vision, and enhance the body's response mechanisms to allergies and asthma.

Bioflavonoids are a special class of nutrients important in diminishing capillary fragility, preserving blood cell integrity, enhancing circulation and anti-bacterial activity. When capillaries lose their physical integrity, the body is more susceptible to bruising and hemorrhaging. When tissues have become weakened, the body is vulnerable to allergies and immune system breakdown.

Our bodies cannot produce bioflavonoids naturally, however, supplementation has been shown to be very beneficial for the following:

· reduction of capillary bruising

· increased protection against rheumatoid arthritis

- decrease symptoms of asthma
- decrease inflammation after injury
- reduce ulcers
- protection against oral herpes

Coenzyme Q-10, also known as Ubiquinone, is a nutrient which is abundant in human cells. It was discovered in 1957 in the United States, and then was later the subject of Nobel Prize research in Edinburgh, Scotland. Lecithin is a source of Choline and Inositol

Actions: CoQ 10 is important for cell health as well as energy production. One of the main focuses of research with CoQ 10 is with cardiovascular patients. Studies have found that levels of CoQ 10 are low in people with heart disease because CoQ 10 is heavily concentrated in the mitochondria cells in the heart. This also explains how vital the role of Ubiquinone is in overall health. The body's levels of CoQ 10 decline with age, therefore it is necessary to supplement the diet. Food does not contain significant amounts of CoQ10 and the body does not produce enough CoQ 10 on its own, so supplementation is imperative in order to have adequate amounts of it. Recent research has shown that Lecithin and Choline are essential dietary components of optimal nutrition. - Antioxidant
- The subject of Nobel Prize Research
- Essential for Energy Production
- Maintain Normal Cholesterol Levels

Recommended dosage: One to two capsules daily

Description: Each Capsule Contains:

Coenzyme Q-10..... 60 mg. Plus alpha-Lipoic Acid .....50 mg.

In a base of red wine proanthocyanidins.

Contains NO yeast, wheat, soy, corn, milk, salt, sugar, artificial coloring, preservatives or flavoring

Coenzyme Q-10, also known as Ubiquinone, is a nutrient which is abundant in human cells. It was discovered in 1957 in the United States, and was later the subject of Nobel Prize research in Edinburgh, Scotland. The antioxidant Lipoic acid is both water and fat-soluble and so can be delivered and used throughout the body. Antioxidants defend the body from so called free radical scavengers which are substances capable of inflicting severe damage to cells. Lipoic acid acts as an antioxidant, coenzyme and chelator (with the ability to remove toxic metals) and helps other antioxidants withstand the rigors of oxidation while enhancing their effect. Studies have shown that Lipoic acid may be effective against heart disease and diabetes. Lipoic acid is essential for efficient energy production.

Actions: CoQ 10 is important for cell health as well as energy production. One of the main focuses of research on CoQ 10 is with cardiovascular patients. Studies have found that levels of CoQ 10 are low in people with heart disease because CoQ 10 is heavily concentrated in the mitochondria cells of the heart. This also explains how vital the role of Ubiquinone is in overall health. The body's levels of CoQ 10 decline with age, therefore it is necessary to supplement the diet. Food does not contain significant amounts of CoQ10 and the body does not produce enough CoQ 10 on its own, so supplementation is imperative in order to have adequate amounts.

ORDER # 83050 DHEA 25mg

Nutritional support, found in the wild yam, for general well being and youthful mental, immune and cardiovascular functions.

Recommended dosages: One half to one tablet daily as directed by a physician. May be used sublingually.

Description: Each capsule contains DHEA 25mg. DHEA, also known as "the mother hormone", is produced by the adrenal glands and is the most dominant hormone in the body. The body converts DHEA into whatever hormone it needs (i.e. estrogen, testosterone, progesterone, and corticosterone) In both sexes, blood levels of DHEA peak at 20. Thereafter, the levels steadily decline throughout aging, more dramatically with child bearing and with menopause. By eighty years old, the body only has 5% of the DHEA levels it had at 20! Many age-related conditions appear associated with lower than average levels of DHEA. A recent study conducted at Stanford found dramatic clinical results in lupus patients adding DHEA to their diet.

ORDER # 17875 E-200IU

Vitamin E is the main antioxidant protecting cell membranes from damage. Nutritionally supports the heart and cardiovascular health.

Recommended Dosage: One capsule daily

Description: Each Softgel Contains:

Vitamin E (165 mg. dl-alpha Tocopheryl Acetate) 200 I.U.

Vitamin E is a fat-soluble vitamin which is stored in adipose tissue, liver, muscle, adrenal and pituitary glands, red blood cells and platelets, testes, and ovaries. Vitamin E is unstable to heat, light, and oxygen. The 1990 Harvard School Public Health study of nearly 40,000 male health professionals and a 1993 Nurses Health Study conducted at Brigham and Womens Hospital in Boston involving 87,000 women came up with the same results: Vitamin E clearly enhances heart health!

Actions: Vitamin E plays an important role in protecting the body tissues from damaging reactions caused by free-radicals, which arise from many normal metabolic functions, become energetic and unstable and will react with any other molecule to acquire another electron. Free-radicals are responsible for many types of cancer, DNA damage, and blood clots. Vitamin E is a strong antioxidant, helps prolong the life of red blood cells and plays an essential role in cellular respiration. It protects biological membranes including those found in the cardiovascular system, nerves and muscles. Vitamin E helps the body effectively use and store vitamin A and protects B-complex and vitamin C from oxidation reactions. Vitamin E has been used successfully in the therapy of progressive neuromuscular disease in children with liver and bile dysfunction. It is a vasodilator and plays an important role in intermittent claudication, thrombotic disease, immune function, protection of lipoproteins from oxidation, cardiovascular disease prevention, cancer prevention, and helps protect against environmental pollutants and cigarette smoke. Vitamin E is important for fertility, helps prevent: muscle degeneration, encephalomalacia and exudative diathesis is thought to reduce the risk of prostate cancer is an anticoagulant and improves capillary permeability.

Actions: Zinc is important for absorption and action of B-complex vitamins. It is required for protein synthesis, collagen formation, healthy immune system, and the ability of the body to heal from wounds. Zinc is absorbed in the small intestine and is stored in the liver, eyes, kidney, pancreas, bones, muscles, prostate gland, sperm, nails, skin, hair, and white blood cells. Zinc inhibits 5-alpha reductase from converting testosterone into dihydrotestosterone (DHT) a form of testosterone that promotes prostate growth. Zinc increases testosterone, and sperm count. If a zinc deficiency exists sex drive is reduced in order to conserve the zinc (zinc is concentrated in semen). Zinc is involved in protein synthesis, muscle contraction, formation of insulin, maintaining acid-base balance, synthesis of DNA, brain functions, excessive sweating leads to loss of up to 3 mg per day. Zinc helps form insulin to help stabilize energy, keeps prostate healthy, prevents cancer, prostatitis prophylactic, may raise testosterone levels, sperm count, improve potency, can make cadmium less toxic (cigarettes have Cd) and slow its absorption. Zinc helps form insulin, helps synthesize proteins, takes part in metabolism of carbohydrates, essential for production of key enzymes, helps muscles contract smoothly, helps absorb vitamins, particularly B vitamins, crucial for proper development of reproductive organs, helps normal functioning of prostate, helps build cell membranes and DNA, and helps wounds heal faster. It is an immunostimulant, antifungal, improves bladder function, and stimulates hair growth. Zinc reduces prolactin levels (prolactin is linked to production of DHT) thus helping reduce BPH, also inhibits 5-alpha reductase helping reduce BPH. Zinc aids in the production of testosterone.

Description: Each Softgel Capsule Contains:

Pure Cold Pressed Flax Seed Oil 1,000 mg.

Flaxseed oil contains linoleic acid, an essential fatty acid needed for survival. It also contains significant amounts of the essential fatty acid alpha linoleic acid (ALA) . ALA is an omega-3 oil.

Flax seed oil is the richest source of omega-3 essential fatty acids. The modern diet is likely border line in EFAs and enzymes which are needed to utilize EPAs can be damaged through alcohol consumption, aging and diets that are high in cholesterol, sugars or saturated fat. Omega-3 fatty acids play essential roles in nervous system, reproductive and circulatory (heart and blood vessel) health.

Flax seed oil with its omega-3 fatty acids promotes the production of good prostaglandins and reduces bad prostaglandins production such as those involved in the inflammatory process (arthritis).

Hormone-like in nature, prostaglandins regulate many of the body's systems including immune, cardiovascular and reproductive. The EFAs in Flax seed oil help form the membranes surrounding every cell.

ORDER # 14551 KNCR

Can vitamins, minerals and botanicals help reduce the risks of cancer? This is one of the most promising areas of modern research. Studies conclude that taking nutritional supplements may be extremely effective in reducing cancer risk. While whole foods contain many of the recommended nutrients the body needs, supplementation ensures adequate and perhaps even preventive levels .

Recommended Dosage: Four tablets daily with meals.

Actions: Antioxidants are one of the main groups of nutrients being evaluated for the role they play in cancer prevention. The most popular antioxidants include beta carotene, vitamin E, vitamin C and the mineral selenium. And studies show that this group is excellent in protecting against cellular damage and further trials are being conducted on their ability to treat certain types of malignancies.

Carotenoids have been found to interfere with carcinogenesis and are a safe, non toxic preventive nutrient. Numerous studies have been conducted on the effects of beta carotene, alpha carotene, lutein, lycopene and cryptoxanthin. A Japanese a cohort study conducted on 2,300 women and men for 3-6 years found that those with high levels of beta carotene had a “significantly lower risk of dying from cancer.” (Langseth 1995) Mechanisms by which beta carotene may work as a compensator, protector, and immunomodulator are being evaluated.

Vitamin E, a lipid soluble antioxidant, is obtained only in low levels from the typical western diet, levels which are likely not adequate for chemoprevention of cancer. A direct correlation has been found between cancer patients and low levels of vitamin E. Nitrosamine is known carcinogen ingested in some processed foods and Vitamin E can block the production of this harmful substance and assist in the natural production of antibodies. (van Poppel & van den Berg, 1997)

The administration of vitamin C is being extensively explored for its chemopreventative properties. Vitamin C is an essential cell protector. Thousands of studies support the value of vitamin C supplementation. Ascorbate (vitamin C) at high doses has also been found to protect cells from oxidative stress, a known precursor of some malignancies. As an adjunct in the treatment of malignancies, it has especially proven beneficial for the stomach and liver by assisting in the production of enzymes necessary for normal detoxification, an essential part of protection from carcinogen formation. (van Poppel & van dan Berg, 1997) In some cases, high doses of vitamin C have shown the ability to inhibit the progression of certain tumors. Studies have suggested that in order to achieve the maximum benefits from vitamin C as well as the other antioxidants, supplementation should consist of a combination of these nutrients rather than administration of individual components. (Prasad & Kumar 1996)

Selenium, a mineral, offers remarkable protection against oxidative damage. Years of research supports the value of selenium in helping the body prevent some forms of cancer. A recent study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) found that selenium may help reduce the progression of carcinomas in several different sites. (Clark et al, 1996)

Nutritional support for blood pressure homeostasis.

Normal Dosage: One to two tablets daily in divided doses

Description: Each tablet contains: 585 mg. of Magnesium Chloride yielding 70 mg. of elemental magnesium in a polymeric matrix formulated to release magnesium chloride over an 8 to 10 hour period.

The trace element. Magnesium acts as a cofactor in many of the body's enzyme systems including those involved in bone formation, energy production, and metabolism of protein, carbohydrate, and fat. It is essential for the proper utilization of choline, thiamine, biotin, and vitamins C and E. Magnesium is absorbed in the small intestine and stored in the bones, liver, kidney, pituitary gland, and pancreas. It is required for acetylcholine transfer, enhances smooth muscle relaxation and is naturally calming to muscles and nerves. Magnesium is vital for bone and muscle integrity and proper functioning.

Historical Uses (cure or treatment not implied): Alcoholism and other addictive states, allergies, anemia, anxiety, asthma, attention deficit disorders, backache, cataracts, dermatitis, diabetes mellitus, ear infection, environmental toxicity, epilepsy, fatigue, high blood pressure (hypertension), hyperactivity, hypoglycemia, insomnia, intestinal malabsorption, kidney dysfunction, mastitis, migraines, multiple sclerosis, nausea, obesity, otitis, schizophrenia, stomach problems. Supports the body naturally in the maintenance of normal blood pressure and heart rhythm. Attention deficit and hyperactivity may be linked to low levels of magnesium.

Actions (cure or treatment not implied): Magnesium promotes a healthy nervous system and brain, healthy immune system, blood sugar regulation, blood formation, and reproduction. Magnesium helps the body fight fatigue, keeps muscles in working order, maintains levels of sex hormone, helps build the hormone thyroxin, is essential in blood clotting, important in the manufacture of mother's milk, improves memory, reduces nervous irritability, useful for diabetics, and increases glucose tolerance.

The new wave in heart protection and high blood pressure control may well be the mineral magnesium. Researchers have found that a deficiency in magnesium can lead to atherosclerosis (clogging of arteries). There is even animal evidence that supplemental magnesium reverses embedded arterial plaque (the substance that narrows arteries). Low magnesium has been linked to migraine headaches. Magnesium

A blend of natural ingredients with proven anti-oxidant activity shown to: “Lower the incidence of prostate cancer by 34% and colorectal cancer by 16%” according to the National Cancer Institute; “Decrease the incidence of stroke, heart attack, cardiovascular death and coronary heart disease “by Harvard Medical School.

Recommended Dosage: Three capsules per day.

Description: Ultra Anti Oxidant contains sixteen anti oxidant nutrients which are in a well balanced formula in capsule form.

Uses: To provide the body with extra defense against free radicals in a daily nutritional supplement.

Actions: There is a common denominator that causes aging as well as degenerative diseases such as arthritis, heart disease, Parkinson's, Alzheimer's, and Cancer. It is called "free radical pathology." Free radicals are the result of oxidation resulting from an unpaired electron in the molecular outer orbit. They are impossible to avoid, but not impossible to fight. Free radicals can damage our tissues, cells, proteins, fats and the nucleic acids DNA and RNA. In order to combat these damaging agents, it is necessary for human cells to use antioxidants. Antioxidants are enzymes, vitamins and minerals that inhibit and stabilize the uncontrolled multiplication of free radicals. Without antioxidants, the aging process and susceptibility to Varicose Veins, Arthritis, Rheumatism, Cataracts, Phlebitis, Heart Disease and Stroke will rapidly increase. Nutritional supplements are necessary for optimum antioxidant defense, since these enzymes require certain vitamins and trace elements to be activated. It has been found that vitamins A, C, and E, beta carotene as well as the trace elements selenium, manganese, potassium, zinc and methionine are the main nutrient immune system stimulants. Vitamin A is the source of beta carotene that assists the body's natural defenses against free radicals and is one of the most important antioxidants. Along with beta carotene, Vitamin E can neutralize the free radicals as well as inhibit the formation of bad cholesterol. The B complex vitamins are important to activate the antioxidants. Vitamin C and the bioflavonoids also work together to fight damage by free radicals. Studies have shown that increased consumption of vitamin C helped to boost immunity, and protect against pollution, smoke and other sources of free radicals. Calcium, magnesium and potassium are vital for cell stabilization and proper functioning. Vitamin D helps the body to absorb calcium and molybdenum assists in iron utilization. Working together, vitamins C, E and the amino acids cysteine and methionine help our bodies to reject toxic metals. Abnormally located iron, copper and lead assist distribution of free radicals. Therefore, it is necessary to eliminate these metals.

ORDER # 17454 Vitaplus

Our strongest general purpose supplement!

Recommended Dosage: Six tablets daily.

Description: Vita Plus is a broad spectrum nutritional supplement supplying optimal amounts of free radical scavenging nutrients with ample quantities of trace and ultra trace nutrients necessary for nutritional support of healing mechanisms, immunity functions, and the manufacture of antioxidant enzymes.

Uses: As a daily multiple vitamin and mineral supplement.

Actions: Protection against pathologic free radicals is provided by both dietary and endogenous antioxidants. When functioning properly, these antioxidant systems suppress excessive free radicals reactions, allowing healthful biological effects without unwanted cellular and molecular damage. The enzymes Catalase, Superoxide Dismutase and Glutathione Peroxidase dampen free radical chemical reactions. Supple mental nutrients reinforce endogenous antioxidant defense since these enzymes require certain vitamins and trace elements to be activated. Free radical quenchers can also improve the immune defense responses of both T cells and B cells. The main nutrient immune system stimulants and anti free radicals are the vitamins A, C and E, beta carotene, the trace elements selenium, manganese, potassium, zinc molybdenum and iron and the sulfur containing amino acids, Cysteine and Methionine. The B complex vitamins are important for cellular maintenance and potentiate the action of antioxidants. Vitamin C and the bioflavonoids increase capillary resistance to damage by free radicals. Membrane stabilizers include PABA, inositol and choline. Calcium, magnesium and potassium are vital for cell stabilization and proper functioning. Vitamin D aids in the absorption of calcium. The human body lacks an effective enzymatic defense against the very destructive free radical precursor, excited state singlet oxygen. The most important protection against singlet oxygen is dietary intake of beta carotene (pro vitamin A). Beta carotene deactivates atoms of singlet oxygen and can therefore prevent damage to DNA and other cellular constituents. The trace elements copper, zinc and manganese are essential to the Superoxide Dismutase; selenium is essential to glutathione peroxidase; iron is necessary for catalase and in several forms of peroxidase. Molybdenum is known to be present in several enzymes and it is also necessary for iron utilization. Many antioxidant nutrients vital to free radical protection also serve as natural chelators. Vitamins C and E and the amino acids, cysteine and methionine, help rid the body of toxic metals such as lead and abnormally located iron and copper, all free radical catalysts. The administration of the sulfur containing amino acids, methionine and cysteine, may ameliorate the toxicity of over 40 compounds.
